Mayor Ballard Announces Vetoes of Council Proposals

INDIANAPOLIS – Indianapolis Mayor Greg Ballard today announced his veto of two proposals passed by the City-County Council.

The following proposed ordinances were returned today to the Clerk of the City-County Council without the Mayor's signature:

Proposal 362, 2012 – A proposal to divert RebuildIndy money from infrastructure to public safety

"When the sale of the water utility was being discussed, I made a commitment to the residents of Indianapolis that I would use the revenue generated only for the infrastructure needs in our city," said Mayor Ballard. "I intend to keep that commitment to the people of our city. Using one-time money for an ongoing expense is unsound fiscal policy."

Proposal 372, 2012 – Redistricting

"The maps that I signed into law earlier this year are legal, fair and compact. They have greater population and racial equality than those proposed by the Council majority," said Mayor Ballard.
